

YOUR VOICE MATTERS

By Josh Symonds

In the quiet moments, when you feel unseen,
When the world spins fast, and you are lost in between,
Know that your words, no matter how small,
Have the power to echo, to break through it all.

Your voice matters, it is strong, and it is true,
It carries the weight of all you have been through.
In whispers or shouts, in laughter or tears,
It speaks for your heart, your dreams, and your fears.

So, speak up, stand tall, let the world hear,
For your voice holds courage, it is bold, and it is clear.
In a chorus of millions, it rises above—
A song of resilience, of hope, and of love.

No silence can dim it, no noise can compete,
Your voice is a rhythm, a steady heartbeat.
In the grand tapestry, you weave your own thread—
A voice that inspires, a voice that leads.

So never doubt that you have something to say—
Your voice matters, every step of the way. Your Voice Matters

In the quiet moments, when you feel unseen,
When the world spins fast, and you are lost in between,
Know that your words, no matter how small,
Have the power to echo, to break through it all.

Your voice matters, it is strong, and it is true,
It carries the weight of all you have been through.
In whispers or shouts, in laughter or tears,
It speaks for your heart, your dreams, and your fears.

So, speak up, stand tall, let the world hear,
For your voice holds courage, it is bold, and it is clear.
In a chorus of millions, it rises above—
A song of resilience, of hope, and of love.

No silence can dim it, no noise can compete,
Your voice is a rhythm, a steady heartbeat.
In the grand tapestry, you weave your own thread—
A voice that inspires, a voice that leads.

So never doubt that you have something to say—
Your voice matters, every step of the way.